“Fusfoo is uniquely positioned to discover today’s talented journalists. While the platform enables students to express themselves on behalf of their school, it provides future journalists a chance to both discover their interests and develop a portfolio of work while they are in high school. This takes a school newspaper story and gives it a chance to be consumed across the country.”

- Tom Curley, Former President of Associated Press

“Fusfoo provides students with a healthy and bully-free environment and helps to foster long-term support for school districts.”

- Tara Gao, AASA (National School Superintendent's Association)

“Fusfoo provides a safe, exciting and tech-savvy creative outlet for high school students’ work. By combining video and editorial content onto a single platform, Fusfoo helps schools and students build portfolios while sharing intriguing news and articles with the broader Fusfoo network.”

- Laura Huggins, Sr. Director of Business & Partnership Services, PSBA

“Let the world meet the next generation! Fusfoo provides an attractive, smart platform for showcasing high quality student work - every kind of student composition and creative expression across the full range of curricula. What a wonderful way to give voice and vision to the awesome capabilities of young people everywhere! All schools should get onboard.”

- John Tindall-Gibson, CT. Association of Public School Superintendents (CAPSS)

“Fusfoo has transformed my high school journalism classroom. Many students have responded enthusiastically to the opportunity to share their writing immediately and to receive their greatly-valued feedback via likes and reposts. In fact, one student has transitioned from uninterested and non-performing to instead being enthusiastic and productive; even purchasing his own camera, developing a photography club, and envisioning becoming a professional photographer. Furthermore, the Fusfoo team has been very encouraging, supportive, and friendly along the way.”

- Tracey King, Greaster Johnstown Fusfoo Channel Supervisor

We've been working hard and really enjoying ourselves. I honestly feel much more in touch with what's happening in my school than I ever did before.

- Jackie Heidenreich, Juniata High School Fusfoo Channel Supervisor

Finally, thank you. The element that Fusfoo provides, as a motivational and educational tool, is great. It is something that many school districts can use, and Truman was better for it last year.

- Ed Black, Truman High School Fusfoo Channel Supervisor

Fusfoo has allowed me, as an actress, to develop my improvisation skills to a greater extent. I have learned so many new things by being given the opportunity to meet people in different industries and getting their insight and wisdom on life and careers. I was connected with Ed Young, the co-founder of The Source, who later on gave me college advice. I was able to try new things such as eating octopus for the first time. Because of Fusfoo I have been educated through real world experience, which in turn has helped develop my communication skills on an entirely different level. Fusfoo has given me hope right along with inspiration. Thank you Fusfoo!

Working with Fusfoo has been a transformational experience. Fusfoo has provided a platform for me to experiment as a filmmaker with new projects that I would have not had the opportunity to create anywhere else. From interviewing street musicians throughout Manhattan, I was able to gain insight on life and musicianship. Traveling to Philadelphia with Fusfoo, I was able to interview politicians such as senators and past presidential candidates outside of the Democratic National Convention. I was the cinematographer for interviews with science and music professors from Temple University, as well as with the Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania, Mike Stack. These experiences have helped me further realize that filmmaking is my career path and passion which I am going to pursue.

-Charlie Ehrman, Student

The culmination of my time as a summer intern with Fusfoo was fun, informative, and inspirational. From going to the DNC to filming different Man-on-the-Street interviews in the city (and learning, in practice, the importance of good audio), I feel like I learned more aspects about filmmaking, both behind and in front of the camera. What I loved most about this summer was the openness to my different creative ideas. Whether I wanted to find a street musician to document, or talk to people about their fears, the Fusfoo team was helpful from the idea phase up until the final edit. I feel like this internship has given me further motivation to pursue filmmaking as a career, because I have experienced a part of the industry first hand. Thanks for an unforgettable summer!
